"As a matter of fact, the writing of the world is as marked and sarted in its peculiarities as are the features of the writers. The close observer distinguishes between nationalities by their writings as readily as he done by speech, brystogenomy or any other races peculiarity. Even when one has learned to write another than his native language, the race distinction remains to a very perceptible degree.

"The writing of a German, Frenchman or other foreigner who has learned to speak and write the English language will reish a cityle as preceptible to the expert as will be the secent in the foreigner's speech and the one can positive the afternoon or availed than the other.
